About Us

The Tennessee Cultural Heritage Preservation Society (TNCHPS) is a statewide service organization with the purpose of preserving African-American history and culture through historic preservation efforts and educational initiatives. Established in 1997, TNCHPS is a non-profit organization governed by the laws of the state of Tennessee. Although the organization is headquartered in Memphis, our diverse membership is drawn from individuals, organizations, and agencies from across the state.

TNCHPS was created because of growing demand for the preservation of African-American history and heritage, and out of the understanding that the most effective and respected preservation efforts in African-American communities come from within those communities.

Our Goals

1. To promote the preservation and conservation of the built and social history of African-Americans
2. To promote the increased participation of African-Americans in historic preservation
3. To build a community of people interested in preserving African-American history and culture
4. To serve as an advocate for issues that are important to the members of TNCHPS
5. To develop public school curriculum for understanding the importance of preservation
