Calling all Field School alumni, their parents and descendants,
and other interested parties:

Your school will be 100 years old in a few short years. Deborah Rivera, the new principal, wants to start gearing up to celebrate now. She's looking for old photographs and mementos associated with the school, t-shirts, report cards, stories and memories. Anything you have that bears on school days at Field, going all the way back, will be treasured, gently handled, and returned to the owner at the end of the celebratory display.

"All the way back" actually goes beyond 1915 if you're talking about school days on the grounds where Field now stands, on Sacred Heart Lane. Back in 1858 – and this is the gospel according to Sam Thomas – eleven Crescent Hill neighbors, including Thomas Kennedy and Godfrey Stilz, to name two whose names remain on the neighborhood landscape, built the Spring Station School for girls there. It operated for about 10 years.

In 1915, the school system – and, again, we're quoting Sam and Deborah Thomas's new book, Crescent Hill: Its History and Resurgence – spent $89,781 on a school with eight classrooms, for 320 pupils, in grades one through six. It also had an auditorium, two combined gymnasiums and play rooms, an office, library and rest rooms and a room for a visiting nurse and physician. For at least part of the time since then, pupils who lived on Crescent Avenue and east went to Field School, and those who lived west went to Clark School between S. Peterson and Galt streets. After the sixth grade they all went to Clark.

Anne Driskill, who lives on Eastover Avenue, said the hallway at Field appeared to be extraordinarily long when she started there as a kindergartener in 1934. She can name her Kindergarten and first grade teachers – Mrs. Logsdon, a widow, and Miss Snow. She doesn't remember her third grade teacher's name, but she remembers she had to quit before the year was over because she got married. Married women were not allowed to teach in those days.

Field School is looking for mementos.

Anne remembers that pupils read the bible after the pledge of allegiance back then, and they had "stupid things you had to cut out and paste under pictures." At lunch, pupils could get peanut butter on buns for two cents, and Anne thought they were great. On May Day "they had a May Pole and we danced or did something," she said. In summer there was a little garden on the school grounds, and neighborhood children planted things.

Marie Goodwin, who moved onto Eastover across the lane from Field about the time the school was built, and still lives there, went to Sacred Heart instead of Field. But she remembers that the school faced Frankfort Avenue when it was first built, and there was a big circular drive on the north side of the school, with a front door that gave visitors a straight shot into the gymnasium. "The drive was very nice for skating," she said.

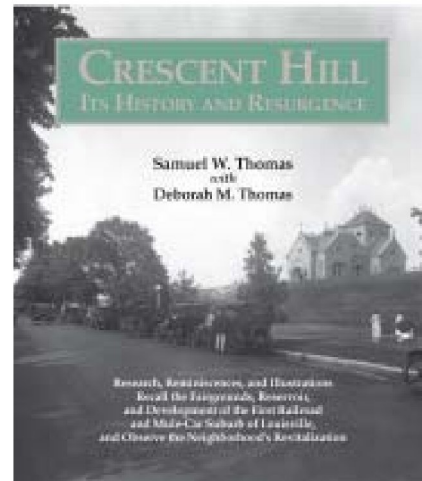

There was a playground on the west side of the school, and the space where the playground is now was a "big open field" that she and her friends used to pretend was a wilderness. "They even had cows over there," she said.

Barb Sinai, who lives on Gardiner Avenue at the end of Eastover Court, said the current exterior of the building was added in 1969 and 1970, and about doubled the size of the school. The old building was entirely enclosed. If you stand over near the playing field on the grounds of Sacred heart and look at the chimney, you can see a piece of the old exterior above the roof of the new.

That all is to prime you to get into the attic and those old trunks and dig out stuff from Field school days. The celebration is still a three years off, but there's no time to get started like the present. Call Deborah Rivera at 485-8252 to offer use of your treasures.

Green Triangle—Your Impact

by Tina Ward-Pugh

Since last May when we announced the 9th District Green Triangle Vision, we've been very excited about the opportunities that exist for everyone to be a part of making our neighborhood more green. Listening to your opinions and working with your neighbors, we created the vision statement below.

Imagine Individuals, Businesses and Government working together to create a 9th District of:

- Green spaces for people to connect with nature and each other;
- Green options for transportation;
- Green thinking that promotes the conservation of resources and our small neighborhood feel.

One of the keys to making this vision a reality is measuring our impact. This fall we launched a powerful tool that will help us do that. The Green Triangle website (www.mygreentriangle.com) will be a hub for green activity in the District. One of the most important features of the site will be the ability to track and measure our progress. The site will allow residents to identify sustainability goals that are important to them, and then provide an opportunity for people to report on their progress towards their goals.

Are you interested in reducing the amount of energy you use in your house? Set a goal around it, and then show off how much you've done! We'll then take that information and put it together with all your neighbors' to get an overall picture of all the greening of our community. All of us working on our own, and together, will create a huge difference for our neighborhood.

In addition to tracking all our impact, my office is trying to bring green thinking to everything we do. A great example of this is the recent expansion of our recycling program. We know that people in the 9th District are some of the most active recyclers in the city, so why not make it easier for them to do it. Building on the success of the Frankfort Avenue Business Recycling project, we are now offering 95-gallon recycling carts to all businesses AND residents in the 9th District Urban Services District. For a nominal fee, anyone in the district may access a 95-gallon recycling cart. To request a large recycling cart at your business or home please contact Special Projects Coordinator Katie Holmes at katie.holmes@louisvilleky.gov or call 574-1109.

A little history: The Peterson-Dumesnil House was built in 1869 as a summer home for Joseph Peterson, a prominent tobacco trader. In 1976, the house achieved local landmark status, which requires approval of the Louisville Landmark commission for any exterior change. In 1982, when the Board of Education declared the property as surplus, the non-profit Peterson-Dumesnil House Foundation bought the house, carriage house and 1.3 acres.

Keep our historic home in great shape and get a little help with your taxes. There are several membership levels to choose from with each offering unique incentives.

Supporting The Peterson-Dumesnil House by becoming a member is a wonderful way not only to keep our historic home in great shape but also to take a bite out of your 2011 taxes! Please consult your tax advisor for details.

Fitness on Frankfort 24/7

After nearly 17 years of doing business in Crescent Hill, Fitness on Frankfort is expanding to a 24/7 model. Gym members will now be issued a facility key card which will grant them access to the building 24 hours a day, 7 seven days a week. Staff will be on-site from 7-9 am Monday through Friday and from 4-6 pm Monday through Thursday, or by appointment.

"We want to be able to accommodate everyone's busy schedule," says co-owner Jody Swimmer, "and we would love to see more local personal trainers who don't have their own facility use our gym to train their clients. The new 24/7 model allows us to provide for maximum flexibility and maximum results!"

The membership fees for Fitness on Frankfort will remain the same, ranging from $45-$65 per month, depending on the length of contract. There are no sign-up or application fees.

Fitness on Frankfort, located at 2726 Frankfort Avenue, was founded in 1995 by co-owners Jody Swimmer and Rick Lyons. Call (502) 895-4321 or visit www.fitnessonfrankfort.com.

store. Our daughter and her husband, my mom and dad and our son have all helped at different times." The store carries mainly used (gently) books but can also special order new books. It offers a 20% discount on most new books. Judy says, "We have almost every category of books, including religious books, which most general bookstores don't carry. We felt that with the seminaries, and many churches in the area, a religious books section was needed." The store has free wireless Internet and a story time for children at 11 am on the second Saturday of the month. Stop by on the next Fat Friday, they usually have music and refreshments on the front porch.

Be Proud, Crescent Hillians!

by Pat Brinson and Pam Leezer

Field Elementary and Principal Deb Rivera graciously hosted the CHCC Annual Dessert with the Mayor on September 1. Mayor Greg Fischer first posed with Best Dessert winner Lydia Thomas and then spoke.

During this talk the Mayor shared his visions for Louisville. He mentioned the "passing of the baton" from former Mayor Jerry Abramson and complimented our 4th of July Celebration and Art and Music Festival. Mayor Fischer admitted he'd planned to stay at the 4th of July Celebration for twenty minutes, but enjoyed it so much that he stayed two-and-a-half hours and exclaimed, "Your art fair---it's really grown, hasn't it!"

The mayor continued to praise Crescent Hill including our recycling project (thank you, Council Woman Tina Ward-Pugh and the Green Triangle Group) and our neighbors in Clifton for the Community Garden.

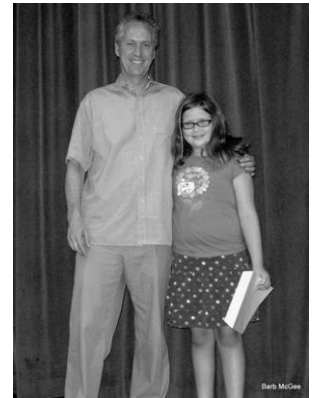

Mayor Greg Fischer

Mayor Fischer said, "You live in one of the best neighborhoods in the nation. Notice that I did not say Crescent Hill is one of the best neighborhoods in Louisville, but in the nation, because you truly do have one of the best in the nation."

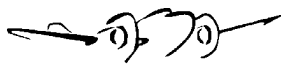

Proud? You bet we are! Now, do you want to volunteer to help Crescent Hill reach even higher potential and continue to keep our neighborhood unique? Please contact us to indicate your interest in volunteering: whether it's for two hours or a longer commitment. We know you can't always volunteer, but it's a fun time for all when you can. For those of you who have already offered to volunteer, we'll be calling you soon; we do need you and we appreciate your patience.

For more volunteer information/opportunities, contact Pam Leezer at 552-2889 or diazepam1955@gmail.com

SHIFTING LOYALTIES: THE KENTUCKY SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND IN THE CIVIL WAR, Sat, Nov 19, 10 am–noon. The American Printing House for the Blind was established in 1858. By 1860, its new press was set up in the basement of the Kentucky School for the Blind. However, the new company did not produce its first book until 1866. Why not? The Civil War. Come listen to historian and APH Museum director Mike Hudson explain what happened to the American Printing House for the Blind, the Kentucky School for the Blind, and Louisville in the tumultuous four-year period when, in Kentucky, brother fought against brother. Free, but registration required. Call 899-2213 or email kcarpenter@aph.org by Nov 18. For adults and older teens.

FAMILY DAY OPEN HOUSE, Sat, Nov 26, 10 am.–3 pm. Friends and relatives visiting for Thanksgiving? Looking for something special to show them? Bring them to APH's Museum. Visitors can write their names in braille, see the book of Psalms from Helen Keller's Bible, play games designed for children who are blind, and enjoy many other activities in this award-winning museum.

HOLIDAY CARD FACTORY, Sat, Dec 10, 10 am–noon. Come learn about the various ways people who are blind and visually impaired "see" with their fingers through tactile illustrations. Then join us in a tactile holiday card-making workshop to celebrate the spirit of Christmas, Hanukkah, or Kwanza, and add a message in braille. Free but registration is required. Call 899-2213 or email kcarpenter@aph.org by Dec 8.
